Studying modifications to your loan

Modifications to your loan giving rise to a contractual amendment :

These are written modifications concerning one or several conditions of your initial loan contract. These modifications are possible throughout the life of your loan, and at your request.

The modifications giving rise to a contractual amendment are notably :

- a modification of the repayment arrangements
- transformation of a bridging loan into a repayment loan
- in a combined bridging / repayment loan, transformation of the bridging part into repayment.

Subject to acceptance by the lender.

Modification of collateral :

This means modifying the collateral covering the loan. For example, partial release of collateral, ceding rank and granting a right of subrogation are modifications of collateral.

Subject to acceptance by the lender.

Total release of collateral :

This is a notarial deed whereby the lender releases the mortgage charge taken on the borrower's property.

In the case of total early repayment for example, the borrower requests the total release of the mortgage charge. On the other hand when the loan goes to its full term, it is not necessary to request this ; the mortgage charge expires automatically on the date registered by the notary in the land charges registry.

Requests for statements and other documents

Issuing an explanation for accounting entries :

When, in addition to oral explanations, the borrower wishes to receive a written analysis of the accounting entries, this will be sent by post.

Repayment plan :

This is a document which gives the breakdown of the amount of each instalment between capital, interest and insurance premiums if applicable. It also states the outstanding capital after payment of each instalment.
